

You can make a difference by leaving a gift in your will

When you leave a charitable bequest, your kindness lives on, improving lives long after you've gone.

A gift in your will to the AMRF is a wonderful way to show the world what you were passionate about.

Research | Awareness | Early Detection

The Australian Melanoma Research Foundation (AMRF) is a not-for-profit charity organisation established in 2006 by a group of dedicated volunteers to provide funding for melanoma research, awareness and early detection programs.

The AMRF provides grants each year with a focus on early career researchers.

The AMRF also aims to reduce and prevent the incidence of melanoma, known as Australia's national cancer, by conducting regular education and awareness programs and participating in community events. We have changed outcomes through free spot skin checks at these events.

We have been helping to save Australian lives since 2006.

I want to make a difference

Decide on the type of gift you would like to leave. Some examples are:

- A percentage of your estate
- The residue of your estate
- A specific amount of money
- The value of your property, stocks or shares

Speak to your family and let them know how you feel and why you want to leave a gift to the AMRF.

Speak to your solicitor about what you'd like to do and tell them why you're making this decision. They can then advise on the best way to proceed. Adding a simple extension to your will may be all that's required.

Why think about charities?

We rely on bequest gifts and donations in addition to our ongoing fundraising campaigns, as we don't receive government funds to fund our wonderful researchers in their aim to change alarming statistics and future outcomes.

With your thoughtful gift we can continue saving Australian lives through research, building awareness and encouraging people to get regular skin checks. Early detection saves lives.

Every gift helps

Even the most modest gift makes a difference. You don't have to be rich or famous to leave a bequest.
