Save your skin

1 in 3 Australians will develop skin cancer in their lifetime, and melanoma is the most serious form of skin cancer.

The good news is around 90% of melanomas can be successfully treated if detected early.

Know what to look for, check your skin regularly, and see your doctor if you notice anything new or changing.

About the Australian Melanoma Research Foundation

The Australian Melanoma Research Foundation is a not-for-profit committed to empowering Australia's next generation of melanoma researchers.

Our mission is to significantly contribute to the prevention, early detection and treatment of melanoma by investing in innovative research that improves outcomes for Australians affected by the disease.

Through competitive research awards for emerging and early career researchers, we support groundbreaking projects that advance scientific discovery and bring us closer to a future free from melanoma.
